

Deregulation has already gone too far. In Cincinnati, Clear Channel owns 1 of 4 commercial TV stations and more than half of the commercial radio stations. News coverage is a low priority at most stations, and there are limited voices and opinions as news and sports personnel are shared by Clear Channel stations. In radio, the number of hours of local programming is declining as local shows are replaced by syndicated Clear Channel programs originated elsewhere. Unless you can buy Clear Channel time, there is little local programming. The public interest is not being served. Deregulation has gone too far already!
